

Offenders Exploit a Converged Environment

CEOP releases its latest intelligence report

Child sex offenders are switching between the internet and the offline world with increasing frequency and severity in order to target and in some cases abduct young victims and parents could and should do more. Publishing its 2008/09 Strategic Overview designed to inform the wider policing and child protection communities of the emerging trends and patterns of offender behaviour, CEOP have published a public version via podcasts and downloads so that they too can understand how the threat manifests itself.

To view the watch the video podcast, listen to the Executive Summary or read the full public version of the 2008-09 Strategic Overview, visit www.ceop.police.uk